

Creek course at Fiddler's Creek recognized among nation's top 100

For the 12th consecutive year, The Creek Course at Fiddler's Creek has been recognized as one of the Top 100 Residential Golf Courses throughout the United States by Golfweek Magazine.

Designed by acclaimed golf course architect Arthur Hills, The Creek Course is situated amidst lush natural surroundings with saw grass marshes and abundant wild-life and is the only golf course in Southwest Florida to earn this prestigious recognition for the past 12 years straight.

The 18-hole, Par 72 Creek Course is designed in harmony with the luxury, master-planned community's environmental setting and features a series of holes that are strategic and challenging, yet accessible for golfers of all skill levels. This year, a nationwide team of esteemed course raters from across the United States determined the list, which appears in the November 7, 2016, issue of Golfweek.

Since beginning its rating system in 1997, Golfweek has developed the most respected ranking structure in the industry. The design excellence-based criteria can include overall strength of routing, feature shaping, natural setting, greens, variety and memorability of holes, conditioning and maintenance, landscape management, and other statistical data.

Opened on February 1, 2002, The Creek Course at Fiddler's Creek also has received extensive recognition in Links Magazine as one of America's 100 Premier Properties and Travel + Leisure Golf Magazine's America's Top 100 Golf Communities List.

The Creek Course features 67 bunkers, broad fairways, elevated greens and majestic stone bridges. Each hole provides seven tee placements to accommodate golfers of every skill level.
